Out of 127.59 million households in the United States, only 36 million have home security systems,

House holds with and without security

Benefits

As the number of home security systems increased in an area, the number of residential robberies decreased in that area, even for people who didn't have their own security system. Having a security system not only protects you, but helps deter crime and creates a safer neighborhood for everyone.

but having the system in your home can lower your homeowner's insurance by up to 20%.

The sense of security and comfort you gain with an alarm system is perhaps the greatest benefit of all. Next to being safe, the confidence of feeling safe will help you be a more productive, healthy, and focused person.
